

With the cost of college continuing to rise, we must do more to help young Americans achieve their dreams. Today, I supported a bipartisan measure to cut the interest rates on subsidized student loans in half. Our legislation will make college more affordable and accessible to thousands of people. A college education remains the key to success in our society and it should be an opportunity open to all Americans.